Mum of girl who died offers break away for woman and her family

THE family of a woman fighting cancer has been offered the chance to get away from it all for a few days in the New Forest thanks to a local charity.

Pam Marshall, the co-founder of Hannah's Appeal, saw the story in The News of how Cathryn Wyllie's friends are fundraising to send her and her family on a dream holiday.

Cathryn, 29, beat leukaemia as a teenager, but earlier this year was diagnosed with breast cancer and has since discovered that it has spread to her hips and spine.

Pam's daughter Hannah Westbrook died of Hodgkins disease aged 10 in 2004.

The family, from Waterlooville, started the appeal in her memory and bought a holiday home which they now offer to families in need of a break.

Pam said: 'Times like these are stressful enough as it is.

'I've been there, done that, and know the trials and tribulations that go with it.

'And because of that, we know how valuable family time is. We want to be able to make life a bit easier and offer them some happiness.

'In situations like this, it won't just be Cathryn who suffers, the whole family has to go through it and it puts a lot of pressure on them - watching a loved one go through hell.

'Anything we can do to help people like Cathryn, we will.'

Beacon Way in Park Gate, described it as 'a lovely gesture'.

'It's small charities like this that you don't hear so much about, but can help so much,'

she said.

'It looks wonderful.'

Cathryn said it came at the right time as she has been struggling lately, adding: 'I've been really, really tired.

'I'm doing my best to do everything I can to support my immune system, watch what I eat and manage my pain as best I can.

'I never know whether I'm going to feel fine or really rough, though.'

Cathryn's sister-in-law Paula Willis and niece Ami Willis were inspired to start the holiday fund after Cathryn herself had helped arrange a fundraising party for Macmillan Cancer Research several weeks earlier.

The pair organised a fair at Warsash Wasps SFC's ground in New Road, Warsash, last month and have so far raised around £2,000 towards the holiday.

'We're hoping to be able to book something for the Canary Islands in November.'

'We wanted to offer them some happiness'
